YEAR END - Time to reflect and be thankful!

A WAKEUP CALL

With the end of the year fast approaching and the holidays upon us, this is the time of year when we should take time from our busy schedules to look back over the past year in order to identify the challenges we faced and how we dealt with them. This is a time for reflection and giving thanks to and for those who have helped us along the way. Too frequently we get caught up in the trappings of the holidays—the social and shopping side—and miss out on the real essence of what this season should be. Take the time now to reflect and evaluate how you met your challenges and goals this year.

How many of you achieved your goal of making Black Belt this year? Did you reward yourself? Did you remember to thank your parents or spouse for their part in helping you reach this goal? Sometimes we forget all the people who help us reach our goals - family, teachers, even friends.

The terrorist attacks that our country has experienced in recent years have underscored to many of us how lucky we are to live in this country of plenty and freedom but we must be sure to remember this lesson. Because life is good in America, we forget too fast why. Take time to give thanks for our government, servicemen and women, policemen, etc. who make it possible for most Americans to live a peaceful and plentiful life. Be proud to be an American EVERY DAY!

Life sometimes sends us a wakeup call. My battle with leukemia was certainly mine. It forced me to think a lot about what is important in life and about my many blessings. Without this wakeup call, sometimes we become complacent and take our lives for granted. Don't let this happen to you. Let my wakeup call be yours.

"You gain strength, courage and confidence by every experience in which you really stop to look fear in the face... You must do the thing you cannot do."

➤ Decide what is important to you and put it in the right priority.

- Recognize both your successes and failures and the reasons behind both.
- Don't keep putting off things - if you want to do them, you will find a way.
- Don't use other people or events as an excuse - only you are in control of your life - exercise it.
- Always have a goal. If you don't, you will not move ahead.
- Appreciate the people who help you, and let them know it!

These are just a few of things that I find important. By sharing them with you, I hope you can find them helpful. They have worked for me.

Evaluate Yourself

A Balance Act!

With the holiday season upon us and the end of 2008 fast approaching, we need to take time to assess our lives and determine where we have succeeded and where we need to focus in order to succeed.

Are you balanced in your approach to life?

Balance in our daily lives becomes increasingly difficult to achieve during the increased demands of the holiday season. With parties to attend, gifts to buy, decorating to do, travel schedules and other extra demands on our time, we need especially to take time to set priorities. First, we must decide what our highest priorities are. For example, family time might be the most important item, however, we also need to budget some time to maintain our work or school schedules. The ability to say no may be necessary when time demands become too great. Remember also not to neglect yourself during the holidays. Exercise is one excellent way to deal with the added holiday stress. Quiet, personal time can also help. A well balanced person finds time for himself as well as his family, work, school and church, etc. by planning his time wisely and sticking to a schedule.

Have You Made Progress Toward Your Goals This Year?

As you review the past year, now is a good time to pat yourself on the back! Recognize your successes! Realize how far you have come.

Where Can You Focus Next?

Part of the self-evaluation process is determining where we need more focus. Examine your past successes and determine why you succeeded. Did you work hard, plan well and persevere? Apply that energy to your other goals now! Also take time to evaluate why you didn't meet other goals. Look at the reasons why and decide what you could have done differently in order to achieve them.

Frequent evaluation of our individual progress is the fastest road to success. Look for the things you did that contributed to your successes and the things you might have done differently. Remember, the only person you can control is you!

2008 has been a great year! We hope you all enjoy the holiday season and are looking forward to 2009 with new hope and energy.

Merry Christmas & Happy New Year!

Healthy Habits During the Holidays

During the months of November and December, we all tend to eat too much and not eat healthy foods. It's part of the holiday season to indulge a little. Indulging a little is not bad for you, but you need to keep it under control and there are ways to do this. The average person gains 7 pounds between Thanksgiving and Christmas. The worst thing you can do is resist your favorite foods. Instead, try only eating a bite or two of your favorite fattening foods. Do not fast or skip meals. This only lowers your energy level. Eat three well-balanced meals every day. Fill your home and office with the smells of the season, such as pine scented items. Aromas don't have calories!

It is equally important to get plenty of rest during the holiday season. Too little sleep, say scientists, and you're more apt to succumb to the munchies - eating more, and more often. So get plenty of zzz's. No matter what the activity this time of year, take time out to rest and relax. This will help with stress as well as make you feel better overall.

Exercise is also very important during the holiday season. People tend to get lax because they are too tired or have too much to do. If you have a regular exercise program such as taekwondo or aerobics, don't skip classes. Exercise will help give you the stamina needed to get everything done you need to do and help make you feel better.

Basically, be sensible where your health is concerned, but have fun and enjoy all the holiday events available to you!

"Why Practice Patterns?"

Why indeed? Today we are seeing more and more martial arts discarding the traditional training methods such as drillwork and patterns and only practicing free sparring, impact training, takedowns, etc. Where does this lead? Directly to declining power and quality of technique in their black belts as well as fewer people "sticking to" their martial arts more than a year or two!

As I evaluated the results from the 2008 CTF National Championships, I noticed a very obvious fact—ALL but one of the National Champions won the forms half of the competition! In almost half of the divisions, the forms champion came back and won the National Championship from the sparring champion. In the other half the forms and sparring champion were the same. In the regular tournament the forms winner also won in sparring too. What does this show us? Practicing our patterns is the key!

Why does practicing patterns lead to better free sparring?

Think of the pattern system as your encyclopedia of Taekwondo moves. By practicing your patterns and drilling the moves that make them up, you are training your body to respond with good technique and the proper move when you don't have time to plan a response (like in free sparring). You are also developing better technique in a situation where you can focus on the details (unlike free sparring) which will lead to greater power in your technique.

The practice of forms and the constant repetition of drillwork first require the development of self-discipline and perseverance. These are also extremely important character traits that will continue to help you in all aspects of life.

Practice, practice, practice—This is what leads to excellence in martial arts! No one can quit practicing and expect to be very good. Not even Grand Master Hardin who still works out every day after 40 years of training! Not even Steven Miller who works out every day despite winning so many National Championships!

I hope you consider all of this in planning your training routines for the new year. You don't need a classroom or a partner to practice patterns. In fact, you can practice your technique and patterns just about anywhere!
